THREE NORFOLK CASES

Decision of the Law and Chaucery Court of Norfolk Affirmed in the

Richmond, Va., June 17 .- The Su-

office until October 19th. On October 16th the applicant was shot while hunting.

The opinion states that Oliver had, when making application for insurance, stated that he was only a moderate drinker, but that after the policies had been approved, and sent back to the Norfolk office to be delivered the company received two reports showing that the applicant was more than a moderate drinker. This was the motive which led the home office to order the policies to be held after they were returned to Norfolk approved.

It appears that the soliciting agent told Oliver that "If his application was accepted he would deliver the policies to him" and receive the premiums thereon. It was contended that the effect of this promise, made by the company's agent, was to bind the company to deliver the policies when issued, and ida E. Oliver, widow of the applicant, brought suit for the $2,000 of her policy upon the ground that the soliciting agent, by his agreement to deliver the policy when issued, had bound his company to do so, though he could not make a verbal contract of insurance.

The lower court decided that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover. The Court of Appeals affirms the decision. The court is of opinion that there was nothing to show that the company had not acted in good faith when instructing its agent to hold the policies or that it delayed investigating reports that a material statement made by Oliver in his application was untrue. There was an express agreement in Oliver's application that the first premium had been paid, This had not been paid at the time of Oliver's death.

The decision of the lower court is aformed.

SE JOSEPH'S ACADEMY.

The American Net and Twine Company v. Jayo and others, from the Law and Chancery Court of Norfolk, was decided by a divided court, Harrison and Buchanan, J. J., dissenting. The case was an appeal from a decree of the Norfolk court dismissing the bill of the appellant against B. Mayo, his wire and John J. Mayo, their son, the purpose of which was to set aside two deceases. The bill alleged the decise were not upon valuable consideration, but were made to preven the twine company from making a debt due it from Mayo, and while a suit for the same was pending in the Norfolk court. The naiver of John J. Mayo denies generally and asserts that the deeds were upon consideration valuable in law. If there was intent to defraud the defendant avers he was not privy to it. He claims to have paid his faither, in various ways, $5,000 for the property.

The court goes into all the facis, which are very voluminous, and concludes by setting aside the deceds as fraudulent, and remanding the cause to the lower court for such furthers and the deceds as fraudulent, and remanding the cause to the lower court for such furthers and the deceds as fraudulent, and remanding the cause to the lower court for such furthers and the deceds as fraudulent, and remanding the cause to the lower court for such furthers and the decise of the lower court for such furthers and the decise of the lower court for such furthers, and the decise of the lower court for such furthers and the decise of the lower court for such furthers and the decise of the lower court for such furthers and the decise of the lower court for such furthers and the decise of the lower court for such furthers and the decise of the lower court for such furthers and the decise of the lower court for such furthers and the decise of the lower court for such furthers and the decise of the lower court for such furthers and the decise of the lower court for such furthers and the lower court for such furthers and the lowe

TODD VS. SYKES.

TODD VS. SYKES.

Todd vs. Sykes is also from the Law and Chancery Court of Norfolk, and the opinion was also written by Judge Cardwell. The case is an appeal from a decree setting aside, as fraudulent and void, eight deeds made by Lucinda Todd, conveying to her son, Charles H. Todd, a lot on Chapel Lane, in Norfolk, in consideration of $1,200; lots Nos. 26, 28, 34, 61, 63, and 67 on Avenue B, in Huntersville, Norfolk county, for $1,500, the total consideration named in the deeds being $2,700. Five deeds dated July 16, 1895, convey property for an aggregate consideration of $5,580.

The deeds were attacked by Josephine Sykes, daughter of Lucinda Todd, and half sister of Charles Todd, who charged fraud and undue influence, Todd said he originally bought the lots with his own money, but transferred them to his mother because he did not wish to hold them in his own name. He avers that she afterwards simply retransferred them to him.

The opinion affirms the decision of the lower court holding the deeds void. The whole of the evidence is gone into and the character of Todd is assailed very vigorously.

FATAL ENGINE MOVED.

Engine No. 275, which drew a Norfolk and Western freight and its doomed crew on to destruction at Lake Kilby little over a week ago, has been drawn from the wreckage and sent away. It left for Roanoke to-day. Repairs will be done there. It required good work and a heap of it to get the locomotive out. It was pulled up about thirty feet on a side track. The bridge force is now driving piles. They will fix it as permanent and substantial as possible.
